

Authentication is a task aiming to confirm the truth between data instances and personal identities. Typical authentication applications include face recognition, p