

The sparse generalized eigenvalue problem arises in a number of standard and modern statistical learning models, including sparse principal component analysis.