

3D shape generation is a challenging problem due to the high-dimensional output space and complex part configurations of real-world objects. As a result, exist