

Modeling the processing chain that has produced a video is a difficult reverse engineering task, even when the camera is available. This makes model based