

Although low-rank and sparse decomposition based methods have been successfully applied to the problem of moving object detection using structured sparsity