

We address the problem of semantic correspondence, that is, establishing a dense flow field between images depicting different instances of the same object or