

We present Accel, a novel semantic video segmentation system that achieves high accuracy at low inference cost by combining the predictions of two network b