

Despite the recent success in face recognition and object classification, in the field of human gaze prediction, computer models are still struggling to accurately