

Finding a template in a search image is one of the core problems in many computer vision applications, such as template matching, image semantic alignment,