

Recent work has achieved great success in utilizing global contextual information for semantic segmentation, including increasing the receptive field and aggregating global information.