

Classifiers used in the wild, in particular for safety-critical systems, should not only have good generalization properties but also should know when they don't know