

Efficient and reliable methods for training of object detectors are in higher demand than ever, and more and more data relevant to the field is becoming available