

The large availability of depth sensors provides valuable complementary information for salient object detection (SOD) in RGBD images. However, due to the in