

We focus on the problem of predicting future states of entities in complex, real-world driving scenarios. Previous research has approached this problem via low-