

How do computers and intelligent agents view the world around them? Feature extraction and representation constitutes one the basic building blocks towards a