

This paper studies the fundamental problem of extrapolating visual context using deep generative models, i.e., extending image borders with plausible structure