

In order to learn to perform activities from demonstrations or descriptions, agents need to distill what the essence of the given activity is, and how it can be adapted to new situations.