

In image restoration tasks, like denoising and superresolution, continual modulation of restoration levels is of great importance for real-world applications, but ha