

Single image super-resolution, as a high dimensional structured prediction problem, aims to characterize fine-grain information given a low-resolution sample. R