

The concept of conditional computation for deep nets has been proposed previously to improve model performance by selectively using only parts of the model