

Skeleton-based action recognition is an important task that requires the adequate understanding of movement characteristics of a human action from the given