

Discriminative region responses residing inside an object instance can be extracted from networks trained with image-level label supervision. However, learning