

Learning visual features from unlabeled image data is an important yet challenging task, which is often achieved by training a model on some annotation-free in