

Models trained in the context of continual learning (CL) should be able to learn from a stream of data over an undefined period of time. The main challenges here