

We present a new research task and a dataset to understand human social interactions via computational methods, to ultimately endow machines with the ability