

Gait recognition is an important biometric method popularly used in video surveillance, where the task is to identify people at a distance by their walking patterns