

We address the problem of recovering the 3D geometry of a human face from a set of facial images in multiple views. While recent studies have shown impress