

Compared with model architectures, the training process, which is also crucial to the success of detectors, has received relatively less attention in object detection