

We propose a novel algorithm for monocular depth estimation using relative depth maps. First, using a convolutional neural network, we estimate relative depths