

The skeleton data have been widely used for the action recognition tasks since they can robustly accommodate dynamic circumstances and complex background