

Image registration is a key technique in medical image analysis to estimate deformations between image pairs. A good deformation model is important for high-