

Constructing a robust and discriminative local descriptor for 3D shape is a key component of many computer vision applications. Although existing learning-base