

While discriminative local features have been shown effective in solving the person re-identification problem, they are limited to be trained on fully pairwise labels