

State-of-the-art object detectors are usually trained on public datasets. They often face substantial difficulties when applied to a different domain, where the ima