

In neural networks, it is often desirable to work with various representations of the same space. For example, 3D rotations can be represented with quaternions