

Many approaches to semantic image hashing have been formulated as supervised learning problems that utilize images and label information to learn the binary