

This paper presents a novel framework to recover detailed human body shapes from a single image. It is a challenging task due to factors such as variations in