Despite the success of deep neural networks (DNNs) in image classification tasks, the human-level performance relies on massive training data with high-quality