Many recent advances in computer vision are the results of a healthy competition among researchers on high quality, task-specific, benchmarks. After a decade