We present an autoregressive pedestrian detection framework with cascaded phases designed to progressively improve precision. The proposed framework util