One of the main difficulties of scaling current localization systems to large environments is the on-board storage required for the maps. In this paper we propose