The last decade has witnessed a growing interest in video salient object detection (VSOD). However, the research community long-term lacked a well-established