When labeled training data is scarce, a promising data augmentation approach is to generate visual features of unknown classes using their attributes. To learn