The cosine-based softmax losses and their variants achieve great success in deep learning based face recognition. However, hyperparameter settings in these