Unsupervised deep learning for optical flow computation has achieved promising results. Most existing deep-net based methods rely on image brightness consi