The high cost of pixel-level annotations makes it appealing to train saliency detection models with weak supervision. However, a single weak supervision source