Most image completion methods produce only one result for each masked input, although there may be many reasonable possibilities. In this paper, we present