Video frame interpolation is a long-studied problem in the video processing field. Recently, deep learning approaches have been applied to this problem, showir