To bridge source and target domains for domain adaptation, there are three important types of information including data structure, domain label, and class label