The search for predictive models that generalize to the long tail of sensor inputs is the central difficulty when developing data-driven models for autonomous veh